

Swept

by Laura LeHew

sometimes I stem your flood sometimes we become alternate realities good as a palm print on a rifle the ash of penitence, white of innocence against the rent in my chest until death is not enough my space key is sticking how happy that would make you to be killed over math strange and counting my struggle for control